

Four Types of Homework at WRES

Universal Academically Beneficial Tasks

These activities are generally helpful for all learners as they grow over time. Examples include reading, nature walks, number talks, visits to museums, etc.

Preparing for Future Learning In Class

These activities are designed to prepare minds for learning that will occur later on. Examples include watching a preview video or brainstorming topics for writing.

Individually Targeted Support Resources

As individual learners struggle with specific skills, teachers work with parents to provide practice and support that will help fill gaps of learning. Examples include worksheets or online tutorials.

Finishing Work Not Completed During the Day

These activities include anything that a learner might not have completed during the school day.

For All Students

For Individual Students